Notebook

As we go to press, daylight saving has begun, and the building-and-design community is bracing for the spring rush.

We are happy to report that

Pogggenpohl is back in Boston with a new 3,500-square-foot showroom in the iconic Saunders Building at 13 Park Plaza. The space features unique kitchen environments, from bold and modern to inviting and traditional, all reflecting the 130-year-old company's impeccable quality and innovation.

SV Design, an architecture and interior design firm with offices in Beverly and Chatham, Massachusetts, has some exciting news. Stefano Basso, Jennifer Hocherman, and Paul Muldoon have all been promoted to the role of principal. The trio's tenure at the firm totals more than thirty-five years, so these seasoned professionals are well-poised for their new leadership positions.

Makkas Workroom is on the move, opening a new space in Sudbury, Massachusetts. The location is double the size of the company's former Framingham facility, allowing it to offer more interactive experiences, including one-on-one project planning meetings, special events, and mentorship programs. We can't wait to see what Manny Makkas and his team of expert craftspeople create next.

One of Maine's most iconic designers, Angela Adams, is back with a retail location in Portland. The new shop, located at 40 Free Street in the heart of the Arts District, showcases Adams's latest rug and accessory collections alongside many of the timeless classics that launched her into the national spotlight.
